POLES PREPARING TO SEND PEACE ENVOYS

SOVIET ARMIES ARE PRESSING NEAR WARSAW

POLES MAKE DESPERATE DEFENSE IN HAND - TO - HAND FIGHTING 25 MILES FROM WARSAW

(By Associated Press)

Warsaw, Aug. 12, 11 P. M.—Russian-Soviet forces which are attacking the Polish lines northeast of this city have reached a point twenty-five miles from Warsaw. A state of seige has been declared here by the military Government. Civilians are not permitted on the streets after ten o'clock at night and cafes must close at nine.

The determination of the Bolsheviks to press onward to Warsaw showed itself at various points along the battle line today, there being hand to hand fighting in many instances, the Poles savagely defending their positions. Fighting was reported today within thirty miles of the capital.

It was said Pultusk changed hands several times, and last accounts were the fighting was going on in the streets. The Poles were holding the western bank of the Narew River, at this point beating off the Bolsheviks from the north and hurling back other enemy forces which were trying to cross the river.

Draft Peace Terms

Warsaw hummed tonight with military activities and only soldiers and officers were allowed in the streets. Preparations for the defense of Warsaw were being made and lights burned until late in the war office and foreign office where affairs of state were being discussed. The terms and conditions to be considered by the Polish delegates who will meet the Soviet representatives on Saturday to discuss peace preliminaries were also being drafted.

It was decided late tonight that two American and two British newspaper correspondents as well as several Polish, French, Italian, and Spanish journalists will accompany the peace delegation eastward on Saturday. Just how long the delegation will remain at Minsk or wherever the conference will be held is unknown but diplomats here said tonight they expected the conference would last four or five days longer.

Delegation Leaves Saturday

Warsaw Commissioners with authority to negotiate the preliminary treaty of peace expect to leave this city early Saturday morning to meet the Russian-Soviet delegates somewhere on the road between Warsaw and Brest-Litovsk, the foreign office announced today. The meeting, it was said, will be held between five

FAIR WEATHER AND A RAISE IN TEMPERATURE

LOCAL WEATHER OBSERVER FORECASATS WARMER WEATHER

Fair weather and slowly rising temperature is indicated for this vicinity, according to Geo. T. Nixon.

An area of high pressure overlies the Dakotas and Minnesota, while low pressure extends from Illinois to the Gulf states. These pressure conditions have caused showers from Lake Superior to the Gulf of Mexico, and lower temperature from Montana and Wyoming to Wisconsin.

Mr. Nixon reports that temperatures were low enough this morning for a light frost along the Canadian border.

The highest temperature registered was 80 degrees and the lowest 69 degrees. On the same date last year the highest was 85 and the lowest 53.

The sun rose at 5:03 a. m. yesterday and set at 7:08 p. m.

Mr. Waterman will devote his entire time to the selling of the products of the National Biscuit Co.

COACH MEANWELL WILL RETURN TO WISCONSIN

WILL AGAIN COACH BASKETBALL AT WISCONSIN

Dr. E. W. Meanwell, director of the physical education department of the University of Missouri, has resigned that position to return to the University of Wisconsin as basketball coach. Dr. Meanwell was basketball coach at Wisconsin from 1912 to 1916 and in that time the Badger team lost only six games and won the conference championship four times.

In addition to his duties as basketball coach, Dr. Meanwell will act as medical advisor of all Badger athletic teams, an office just created to meet the problems created by the reestablishment of rowing and the increasing enrollment of men in sports.

The resignation of Coach Maurice Kent as baseball coach to accept a position at Iowa State Agricultural college, Ames, Iowa, has resulted in the transfer of Coach Guy S. Lowman from basketball to baseball.

ALLOW SMALLER CITIES CHANGE VOTING HOURS

NO CHANGE IN HOURS IN CITIES OF OVER 5,000 POPULATION.

The change in the election laws governing the hours of opening and closing of the polls, made by the by the legislature at its 1919 session, will become effective in the primary election, September 7th.

The change will not effect Wisconsin Rapids, as the law does not apply to cities having a population of 5,000 or over, and the polls here will open at 6 o'clock a. m. and pclose at 8 o'clock p. m. In cities of less than 5,000 population and in towns and villages, the electors may, by a petition signed by not less than 20 voters, and filed with the clerk, change the hours of voting to include the hours between 6 a. m. and 8 p. m., instead of the old schedule from 9 a. m. to 5:30 p. m.

The hours of the September primaries are scheduled from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m. in cities of less than 5,000 population, but may be changed by petition filed at least 20 days before the election from 9 a. m. to 5:30 p. m.

Text of the Law

The text of the new legislation is as follows:

"Section 1. Subsection (2) of section 6.35 of the statutes is amended to read: Providing that in cities having a population of less than 5,000 inhabitants and in towns and villages the electors thereof may, by petition directed to the city council, town or village board extend the time during which said pools shall remain open to an hour not earlier than 6 o'clock in the morning nor later than 8 o'clock in the evening. Such petition shall be signed by at least 20 voters of such city, town or village and filed with the clerk thereof not less than 20 nor more than 90 days prior to the holding of - - - any regular election. The time fixed in said petition for the opening or closing of the polls shall become effective from and after the date of the finding thereof.

"Section 2. A new subsection is added to section 6.35 of the statutes to read: The provisions of subsections (1) and (2) as to the time of the opening and closing of polls and to the extensions of such time by petition shall apply to the September primary excepting that in towns the polls during such primary shall be opened at 9 o'clock in the morning and closed at 8 o'clock in the evening, unless a petition as provided for in subsection (2) is filed with the town clerk in fixing such time at not earlier than 9 o'clock inthe forenoon and not later than 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The time fixed in said petition shall become effective from and after the date of the filing thereof."

To Help Farmers

The theory of the law in extending the time for voting in towns is that by so doing it will be easier for farmers to cast their votes. Under the new plan they can vote in the evening after their day's work is completed.

EIKS' QUEEN FLOAT TO BE ELABORATE AFFAIR

TO BE NOVEL THRONE FOR POPULAR GIRL

The float for the parade to the Carnival grounds bearing the queen will be an elaborate affair. It is to be constructed under the direction of Fred Roenius, designer and builder of the famous Wisconsin Elks float in the Chicago Grand Lodge Parade, which won first place and brought honor to the state and the local lodge. The design of the float will be kept a secret until the time when the queen mounts the throne and rides to the grounds for the coronation and opening of the Mardi Gras.

Local women are furnishing the yellow flowers and they will be received at the A. G. Miller home, Mr. Roenius stated.

The gown to be worn by the queen is an elaborate dress and will be an exceptionally dainty robe. Local women have been formed as a committee to make the robe.

Automobile owners are asked to join in the parade at 9 o'clock at the St. Paul station. The band will lead the procession.

CANDIDATES HOLD UP HOPE FOR WETS, SAYS BRYAN IN COMMONER

ATTACKS REPUBLICAN AND DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES FOR PRESIDENT ON STAND ON LIQUOR ENFORCEMENT

(By Associated Press)

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 13—"Both Cox and Harding virtually notified Congress to change the Vaistead Act," said W. J. Bryan in The Commoner, his monthly publication issued today.

In an analysis of the acceptance speeches of the rival candidates, Bryan says, "Senator Harding holds out to the wets an alluring hope, while Governor Cox is considerate of the sensibility of the wets and injects a ray of hope into this part of his speech by suggesting that 'legislative branch of the Government is subject to the rule of the majority'".

DESCENDANTS OF THE WEARERS OF THE TOGA, NOW WEAR BLUE DENIM.

Rome.—A large number of aristocratic young men in Rome, Florence and other Italian cities, by agreement, are wearing a special costume this summer costing about $6 to $8. They have declared a boycott on expensive clothing.

The suits are composed of kahki or blue denim trousrs and a shirt or blouse which can quite easily be made at home. AUTOISTS HAVE CLOSE CALL AS CAR HITS TREE

B. L. LEAMY AND L. W. WYMAN HAVE NARROW ESCAPE AS MACHINE TURNS TURTLS ON NEKOOSA ROAD THURSDAY AFTERNOON

What might have been a fatal, if not a very serious accident, occurred Thursday afternoon on the road between Port Edwards and Nekoosa when B. L. LeMay in his Ford roadster, accompanied by L. W. Wyman of this city turned turtle after hitting a tree alongside the road. Both men were thrown from the car but were not injured whatsoever, both assisting to put the demolished machine in order to be brought back to this city.

Missed Rig

Mr. LeMay told a Tribune representative that his car had just come out of a garage and was still in need of repairs as the brakes were not working satisfactorily. He had made a turn in the road and was to pass a horse drawn rig which was traveling south in the middle of the road. Seeing that he could not pass the rig he swung into the ditch to avoid a collision and as he steered back in the road the car crashed into a large tree, the impact of the collision hurling the car back into the road and then it turned turtle. Both men were thrown out of the car without injuries.

Car Is Wrecked

The car was very badly wrecked, the radiator, front axle and other parts of the machine were ruined as well as three wheels being demolished. Both the occupants of the car expressed their wonder of coming out of the mishap without injury. They accounted for the fact that there were no injuries because they were not going very fast when the accident occurred. They did not know the name of the driver of the rig. The car was brought back by local garagemen.

WOOD PULP OUTPUT IS REDUCED BY STORAGE

How large a loss in paper making may be caused by decay in pulp wood through storage was learned in recent observations conducted by the Forest Products laboratory, Madison, at a sulphate pulp mill.

Pulp wood which yielded over 3½ tons per digester when used green yielded only 3 tons after a year's storage. Some which had been stored for from 2 to 3 years yielded only 2½ tons per digester. These losses in production, amounting in the latter case to over 25 per cent, occurred without any compensating reduction in operating expenses. Hence the monetary loss was fully equal to what the lost product would have sold for f. o. b. mill.

Such losses can be largely reduced by so operating the wood yard that the wood is used as nearly in rotation as possible, without allowing any to remain in storage as long as one year.

"There is no use of my being a mystery woman tomorrow night, when every one will be marquerading at the Mardi Gras. I am not very keen about competition."

"Mysteriously Yours,

TODAY FRIDAY THE 13TH NO HOODOO HERE YET

A GOOD DAY FOR HORSESHOES AND RABBITS' FEET

Stop, Look and Think before you do anything today, this is Friday the thirteenth. This is a bad day (for superstitious people) to do anything but die, it would not be a very good day for a wedding, to go into business or to start anything new.

Mr. Noah Webster's International Dictionary tells us that superstition is: "An excessive reverence for, or fear of, that which is unknown or mysterious."

From time immemorial, any way as far back as anyone now living can remember, there have been certain hoodoo days and Friday, the Thirteenth has been one of those days. If anything ever went on the blink on the Thirteenth and especially on Friday the 13th, those who are superstitious and those who like to play the game along without those who are afflicted with superstition, make exceeding capital of the events. The newspapers usually do their share by fitting allusions to the day.

Bring out your rabbit's feet, horseshoes and the like and catch the Mysterious Woman on Friday the Thirteenth, the Mystery Day.

Big gains were shown by the leading contestants for the Queen of the Elks' Carnival, as a result of the balloting last evening. Gertrude Reiland still maintains a slight lead over her nearest rival for the honors, but her lead was cut down from 400 votes to something less than 50 votes, after last night's votes were counted. Lillian Steinberg showed the biggest gain of the evening, polling 1197 votes, compared to Miss Reiland's 860 votes and Marguerite Ragan's 700 votes. Lucille Berard is fourth with a popular vote. Campaign committees, self-appointed, are working strenuously to further the cause of their favorites, and it is expected that a special conveyance will be necessary to cart away the ballot box, after the carnival closes tonight. The balloting tonight will determine who will preside as Queen over the Elk's Carnival, Mardi Gras night, the final night of the carnival. All ballots must be in the box by midnight tonight, the committee states, as no ballots will be accepted after that time.

In the big family contest held on the Carnival grounds last evening, T. W. Anderson, who resides on Route 2, Wisconsin Rapids, had the honor of having the largest family on the carnival grounds. When the contest was called Mr. Anderson with his family was standing on the out-

WHY A LEAGUE IN WISCONSIN?

Many people have asked themselves as well as others why we have or should have need of a Non-Partisan League in Wisconsin. Just what are the grievences in Wisconsin that justify people forming themselves into a league known as or affiliated with the National Non-Partisan League of North Dakota. Is there a situation in the legislative program of the state of Wisconsin which cys for the formation of a Non-Partisan League such as North Dakota had, to lead the people of Wisconsin out of the wilderness and mires of non-progressive legislation and reactionary government? Ask yourselves this question and settle that question as fair minded people when you cast your vote at the primaries in September.

Are the people of Wisconsin persecuted and downtrodden to the extent that they would wilfully blow out the lamp of experience and plunge the state into the darkness of untried and unproven systems of government and economic adventure in one election in one year? We doubt it and we know that the history of the state of Wisconsin has been such as to show that Wisconsin people have been choosing for themselves and will continue to show their will, legally with the ballot. We believe that the ballot will be used at the coming primaries and November election with discretion and judgment for most people want to be conservative in their progress and certain of the ground that they walk on.

Again why a League in Wisconsin?

Where it arose in North Dakota it had one real basis of protest the discrimination of the wheat-buyers against the wheat raisers. The old order of political control could not recognize that any thing could be wrong. The result was a strong organization with a real grievance and a real remedy. The state is one of the strong agricultural states, and it was able to cooperate to cure a real malady. Then it swung toward a complete and radical program of socialistic experiment with economic results that promise disaster. The political organization has attempted all sorts of business enterprises and being based upon theoretical rather than exact and practical understanding their future is not hard to foresee. The bank situation is a case in point. All sorts of financial irregularities were charged and admitted against one of the institutions. From an organized protest against a very real evil the leaders of the League have changed it into a revolt against the very foundations of the state. Their attitude toward the head of the state school system was as mal-oderous as anything that a city gang has ever tried to do. Wisconsin has no wheat problem, in fact it has very few economic problems that are not equally true of any state with divirsified industries. Wisconsin's battles for relief have long since ceased to be distinctive. It has no need of radical leadership. It asks its leaders to be true to its motto, "Forward."

What Wisconsin does need is to purge itself of the imputation of disloyalty; and unfortunately, all of the disloyal elements of the state have grouped themselves with those seeking to overthrow our economic and political system. Issues have become so confused that every voter must think carefully when the issues are mixed and select the thing that promises the greatest good for the greatest number for the longest time. Wisconsin can't afford to nominate and elect any man whose record in the great crisis through which we have passed was not always on the side of America. There are other crisis impending and no changes can be taken. First and foremost our candidates must be American in sympathy, spirit, understanding, and action. Then they must be progressive, but sanely progressive.

SOL LEVITAN TO MAKE STRONG BID FOR PLACE

MADISON BANKER POPULAR CANDIDATE FOR STATE TREASURER.

Solomon Levitan, president of the Commercial National Bank of Madison, who is well known in this city, has announced himself as candidate for State Treasurer on the Republican ticket and seeks the nomination at the coming primaries in September.

Ex-Mayor J. A. Cohen, in speaking of the candidacy of Mr. Levitan stated that the Republicans would go a long way before they would again have the opportunity to nominate as strong a candidate for the treasurership as they find in Mr. Levitan. "As a public servant, I believe that Mr. Levitan will make an excellent record if he is elected and I certainly take this opportunity to endorse him to the voters of this county," was Mr. Cohen's strong recommendation of Mr. Levitan.

Mr. Levitan has announced his program, which he believes is progressive and one which will appeal to the great mass of people in Wisconsin. He was a candidate on the Republican ticket for the nomination two years ago but on account of not having made a state-wide campaign was defeated for the nomination.

A happy day at Victoria Headquarters

The Same Victoria Flour You Used to Get—Before the War

WHEN we had to feed four million American soldiers besides many of the armies of Europe, our Government required all Flour Millers to make the wheat go farther by running all grades of flour ordinarily made, into one.

But, the moment the regulation was removed we were delighted to go back to the milling of our famous product—in the same painstaking, extra-particular way that we had prepared it before the War. This flour is all we make, and all the by-products go into our feedstuffs instead of into a second grade of flour, such as most millers make.

Try one sack. You will never allow your grocer to sell you any other Brand. If he does not carry Victoria Flour, send us his name and address.

ANNUAL TEACHERS CAMP MEETS AT STATE FAIR

TO BE RUN IN CONNECTION WITH UNIVERSITY HOME ECONOMICS EXTENSION SERVICE.

"We want 200 teachers to attend the teachers camp at the state fair Aug. 30 to Sept. 4." says Mrs Nellie Kedzie Jones, in charge of home economics extension work for the University of Wisconsin. "Last year we had a most successful camp with about 100 teachers present."

Teachers will find it worth while to get acquainted with each other believes Mrs. Jones. In addition to the special lectures in the mornings, the teachers will have an opportunity to study the educational exhibits. A number of the women county agents are planning to attend.

"The entire cost to a teacher need not be much," she says. "Seven dollars will cover the cost of board, room in a tent, admission to the fair, registrations and all of the costs of the camp.

"Ask you county superintendents for an appointment to the camp," urges Mrs. Jones. "Have him send in your name to us so that we can send you the proper credentials, and a letter telling of the things you will need to bring to the camp. The fair authorities furnish tents, cots, mattress, and cooking equipment."

A special program of lectures is being arranged by Mrs. Jones. One of the interesting features will be a talk on pictures and a trip to the Milwaukee Art Galleries.

AT THE THEATRES

IDEAL THEATER

As might be suspected, Jack Dempsey, star of the Pathe serial, "Dare-devil Jack,' which will be seen at the Ideal Theater on Monday of each week, has made a "barrel" of money during his fighting career. What may not be suspected, however, is the fact that Jack has not blown in his fortune foolishly.

When the Dempsey fist had landed its owner at the top of the heap and made him heavyweight champion of the world, Jack did not take a day off to buy diamond cuff links or a fleet of high-powdered motor cars or a lake of champagne. He cast himself in the role of Santa Claus, instead. To his father he presented a 537-acre ranch which cost about $53,000; to a mother he presented a $48,000 home in Salt Lake City, and in addition deposited $50,000 in a bank to her credit. He set his brother, John Dempsey up in the oil business in Texas, gave him $1,000 and told him to make good, and established his brother, Jim, in an automobile accessory business in Oregon.

Right here it may be stated that the fact that Jack Dempsey has a brother John does not mean that there are two John Dempseys in the family. Jack's real name is William Harrison Dempsey. "Jack" is really a nom de guerre.

Webster —Man's Man

By PETER B. KYNE

Author of "Cappy Ricks," "The Valley of the Giants," etc.

(Copyright, by Peter B. Kyne)

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—John Stuart Webster, mining engineer, after cleaning up a fortune in Death Valley, Calif., boards a train for the East. He befriends a young lady annoyed by a masher, thoroughly trouncing the "pest."

CHAPTER II.—At Denver Webster receives a letter from Billy Geary, his closest friend. Geary urges him to come to Sobrante, Central America, to finance and develop a mining claim. He decides to go.

CHAPTER III.—Dolores Ruey, the young woman Webster befriended, and who has made a deep impression on him, as he has on her, is also on the way to Sobrante.

CHAPTER IV.—At Buenaventura, capital of Sobrante, Billy Geary, ill and penniless, is living on the charity of "Mother Jenks," keeper of a drawshop. She receives a cablegram from Dolores, telling of her coming.

CHAPTER V.—Dolores' father, Ricardo Ruey, president of Sobrante, had been killed in a revolution led by Sarros, the present executive. Dolores, a child of eight, was smuggled out of the country by Mother Jenks and supported by her in the United States. The old woman, ashamed of her occupation and habits of life, fears to meet Dolores, and sends Geary to the boat to say she has gone to the United States.

CHAPTER VI.—Webster, on his way to Sobrante, is taken ill on the train, and is in a hospital at New Orleans two weeks. Geary bungles his mission, Dolores easily seeing through his story. She greets Mother Jenks as her friend and benefactor. Geary falls desperately in love with the girl.

CHAPTER VII.—At New Orleans, while waiting for the steamer to Buenaventura, Webster saves the life of a young man who is attacked by two assassins. The youth leaves Webster without disclosing his identity.

CHAPTER VIII.—On the steamer Webster finds his stateroom occupied by a stranger who declares his intention of being his guest to Buenaventura. At first amazed, Webster and the stranger, after a somewhat forcible argument, reach an amicable agreement. Webster recognizes him as the youth whose life he had saved the day before, though the other does not know Webster.

CHAPTER IX.—Arriving at Sobrante, Geary welcomes Webster and is instrumental in helping his friend's "guest" ashore. The latter is known to Webster as "Andrew Bowers." Geary houses him at Mother Jenks'. Webster gets the idea that Geary and Dolores are in love, and with the intention of giving Geary every chance he smilingly contradicts the girl's statement that they have met before.

CHAPTER X.—Webster receives a warning conveyed by "Don Juan Cafetero," really John J. Cafferty, Irishman of good qualities fallen through overindulgence in liquor, that there is a plot to assassinate him. Webster makes a firm friend of Cafferty. Later, the American is insulted by a Sobrantean army officer and publicly ridicules him. A challenge to a duel is accepted under such stern conditions that the Sobranteans withdraw it.

"Now, then, spitfire, that will cool your hot head, I trust," he admonished his unhappy victim, and returned to the hotel. At the desk he paused.

"Who was that person I just bathed?" he inquired of the excited clerk.

"Ah, senor, you shall not long be kept in ignorance," that functionary informed him. "That is the terrible Captain Benavides—"

"Do you know, I had a notion it was he?" Webster replied ruminatively. "Well, I suppose I'm in for a duel now," he added to himself as he climbed the stairs to his room. "I think that will be most interesting."

John Stuart Webster changed into dry clothing and descended to the dining-room. Miss Ruey was already seated at her table and motioned him to the seat opposite her, and as he sat down with a contented little sigh, she gazed at him with a newer and more alert interest.

"I hear you've been having adventures again," she challenged. "The news is all over the hotel. I heard it from the head waiter."

"Coffee and pistols for two at daybreak," he answered cheerily. "By the way, I have made my will, just to be on the safe side. Will you be good enough to take charge of it until after the funeral? You can turn it over to Billy then."

She fell readily into the bantering spirit with which he treated this serious subject. Indeed, it was quite impossible to do otherwise, for John Stuart Webster's personality radiated such a feeling of security, of absolute, unbounded confidence in the future and disdain for whatever of good fortune or ill the future might entail, that Dolores found it impossible not to assimilate his mood.

At seven-thirty, after a delightful dinner, the memory of which Mr. Webster was certain would linger under his foretop long after every other memory had departed, he escorted her to the open carriage he had ordered, and for two hours they circled the Malecon with the elite of Buenaventura, listening to the music of the band, and, during the brief intermissions, to the sound of the waves lapping the beach at the foot of the broad driveway.

"This," said John Stuart Webster, as he said goodnight to Dolores in the lobby, "is the end of a perfect day."

It wasn't, for at that precise moment a servant handed him a card, and indicated a young man seated in an adjacent lounging-chair, at the same time volunteering the information that the visitor had been awaiting Senor Webster's return for the past hour.

Webster glanced at the card and strode over to the young man. "I am Mr. Webster, sir," he announced civilly in Spanish. "And you are Lieutenant Arredondo?"

The visitor rose, bowed low and indicated he was that gentleman. "I have called, Mr. Webster," he stated in most excellent English, "in the interest of my friend and comrade, Captain Benavides."

"Ah, yes! The fresh little rooster I ducked in the fountain this evening. Well, what does the little squirt want now? Another ducking?"

Arredondo flushed angrily but remembered the dignity of his mission and controlled his temper. "Captain Benavides has asked me to express to you the hope that you, being doubtless a man of honor—"

"Stop right there, Lieutenant. There is no doubt about it. I am a man of honor, and unless you are anxious to be ducked in the fountain, you will be more careful in your choice of words. Now then: You are about to say that, being a man of honor—"

"You would accord my friend the satisfaction which one gentleman never fails to accord another."

"That lets me out, amigo," Webster laughed. "Benavides isn't a gentleman. He's a cutthroat, a murdering little black-and-tan-hound. Do I understand he wants me to fight a duel with him?"

Lieutenant Arredondo could not trust himself to speak, and so he bowed profoundly.

"Very well, then, Lieutenant," Webster agreed. "I'll fight him."

"Tomorrow morning at five o'clock."

"Five minutes from now if you say so."

"Captain Benavides will be grateful for your willing spirit, at least," the second replied bitterly. "You realize, of course, Mr. Webster, that as the challenged party, the choice of weapons rests with you."

"Certainly. I wouldn't have risked a duel if the choice lay with the other fellow. With your permission, my dear sir, we'll fight with Mauser rifles at a thousand yards, for the reason that I never knew a Greaser that could hit the broad side of a brewery at any range over two hundred and fifty yards." Webster chuckled fiendishly.

Lieutenant Arredondo bit his lips in anger and vexation. "I cannot agree to such an extraordinary duel," he complained. "It is the custom in Sobrante for gentlemen to fight with rapiers."

"Oh, dry up, you smoking murderer," Webster exploded. "There isn't going to be any duel except on my terms—so you might as well take a straight tip from headquarters and stick to plain assassination. You and Benavides have been sent out by your superior to kill me—you got your orders this very afternoon at the entrance to the government palace—and I'm just not going to be killed. Beat it, boy, while the going is good." He pointed toward the hotel door. "Out, you blackguard!" he roared. "Vaya!"

Lieutenant Arredondo rose and with dignified mien started for the door. Webster followed, and as his visitor reached the portal, a tremendous kick, well placed, lifted him down to the sidewalk. Shrieking curses, he fled into the night; and John Stuart Webster, with a satisfied feeling that something accomplished had earned a night's repose, retired to his room his mauve silk pajamas, and slept the sleep of a healthy, conscience-free man.

At about the same hour Neddy Jerome, playing solitaire in the Engineers' club in Denver, was the recipient of a cablegram which read:

"If W. cables accepting reply rejecting account job filled otherwise beans spilled. Implicit obedience spells victory.

"Henrietta."

Neddy Jerome wiped his spectacles, adjusted them on his nose and read this amazing message once more. "Jumped-up Jehosophat!" he murmured. "If she hasn't followed that makeup Webster clear to Buenaventura! If she isn't out in earnest to earn her fee, I'm an orang-outang! By thunder, that's a smart woman. All right! I'll be implicitly obedient."

Two hours later Neddy Jerome received another cablegram. It was from John Stuart Webster and read as follows:

"Hold job ninety days at latest may be back before. If satisfactory cable."

Again Mr. Jerome had recourse to the most powerful expletive at his command. "Henrietta knew he was going to cable and beat the old sour-dough to it," he soliloquized. He was wrapped in profound admiration of her cunning for as much as five minutes; then he indited this reply to his victim:

"Time, tide and good jobs wait for no man. Sorry. Job already filled by better man."

When John Stuart Webster received that cablegram the following morning, he cursed bitterly—not because he had lost the best job that had ever been offered him, but because he had lost through playing a good hand poorly. He hated himself for his folly.

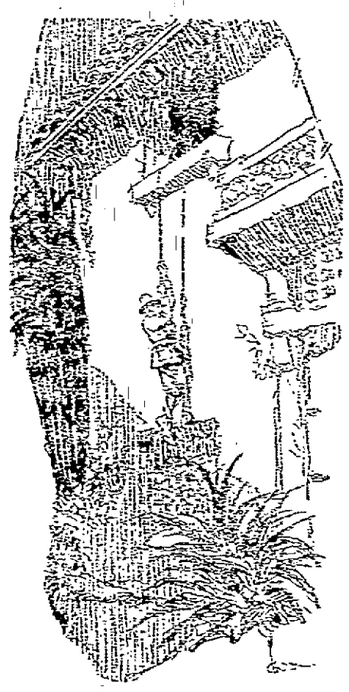
CHAPTER XI.

For fully an hour after retiring John Stuart Webster slept the deep, untroubled sleep of a healthy unworried man; then one of the many species of "jigger" which flourish just north and south of the equator crawled into bed with him and promptly proceeded to establish its commissary on the inner flank of the Websterian thigh, where the skin is thin and the blood close to the surface. As a consequence, Mr. Webster awoke suddenly, obliterated the intruder and got out of bed for the purpose of anointing the injured spot with alcohol—which being done, an active search of the bed resulted in the discovery of three more jiggers and the envelopment of John Stuart Webster's soul in the fogs of apprehension.

"'Tis an evil land, filled with trouble," he mused as he lighted a cigaret. "I wish Bill were here to advise me. He ought to be able to straighten this deal out and assure the higher-ups that I'm not butting in on their political affairs. But Bill's up-country and here I am under surveillance and unable to leave the hotel to talk it over with Andrew Bowers, the only other white expert I know of in town. And by the way, they're after Andrew, too! I wonder what for."

He smoked two cigarets, the while he pondered the various visible aspects of this dark mess in which he found himself floundering. And finally he arrived at a decision. "These chaps aren't thorough," Webster decided. "They'll see me safely to bed and pick me up again in the morning—so I'll take a chance that the coast is clear, slip out now and talk it over with Andrew."

He looked at his watch—eleven-thirty. Hurriedly he dressed, strapped on his automatic pistol, dragged his bed noiselessly to the open window and tied to the bed-leg the rope he used to lash his trunk; then he lowered himself out the window. The length of rope permitted him to descend within a few feet of the ground.



He Lowered Himself Out of the Window.

Webster made his way to the street unnoticed and ten minutes later appeared before the entrance of El Buen Amigo just as Mother Jenks was barring it for the night.

"I am Mr. Webster," he announced. "—Mr. Geary's friend from the United States."

Mother Jenks, having heard of him, was of course profoundly flustered to meet this toff who so carelessly wired his down-and-out friends pesos oro in lots of a thousand. Cordially she invited him within to stow a peg of her best, which invitation Mr. Webster promptly accepted.

"To your beautiful eyes," Webster toasted her. "And now would you mind leading me to the quarters of Billy's friend Mr. Bowers?"

She shuffled away, to return presently with the news that Mr. Bowers was in his room and would be delighted to receive Mr. Webster. Mother Jenks led Webster to the door, knocked, announced him and discreetly withdrew.

"My dear Webster!" cried Andrew Bowers enthusiastically, and he drew his late fellow-passenger into the room. Webster observed that Andrew was not alone. "I want to see you privately," he said. "I'd hit know you had company, or I would hit have intruded."

"Well, I knew I had company, didn't I? Come in, you crazy fellow, and meet some good friends of mine who are very anxious to meet you." He turned to a tall, handsome, soldierly looking man of about forty, whose features, dress and manner of wearing his whiskers proclaimed him a personage. "Dr. Eliseo Pacheco, I have the honor to present Mr. John S. Webster, the American gentleman of whom you have heard me speak."

Doctor Pacheco promptly leaped to his feet and bowed with ostentatious reverence then suddenly, with Latin impulsiveness, he advanced upon Webster, swept aside the latter's outstretched hand, clasped John Stuart Webster in fraternal embrace, and to the old sour-dough's inexpressible horror, kissed him upon the right cheek—after which he backed off, bowed once more, and said in Spanish:

"Sir, my life is yours."

"It is well he gave it to you before you took it," Andrew said in English, and he laughed, noting Webster's confusion. "And this gentleman is Colonel Pablo Caraveo."

"Thunder, I'm in for it again," Webster thought—and he was, for the amiable colonel embraced Webster and kissed his left cheek before turning to Andrew.

"You will convey to our guest, in English, Don Ricardo, assurances of my profound happiness in meeting him," he said in Spanish.

"The Colonel says you're all to the mustard," Andrew at once interpreted merrily.

"Rather a liberal translation," Webster retorted in Spanish, whereat Colonel Caraveo sprang up and clapped his hands in delight.

"Your happiness, my dear Colonel," Webster continued, "is extravagant grief compared with my delight in meeting a Sobrantean gentleman who has no desire to skewer me." He turned to Andrew. "While introductions are in order, old son, suppose you complete the job and introduce yourself. I'm always suspicious of a man with an alias."

"Then behold the death of that impudent fellow Andrew Bowers, late valet de chambre to this eminent mining engineer and prince of gentlemen, Mr. John Stuart Webster. Doctor Pacheco, will you be good enough to perform the operation?"

"This gentleman," said the doctor, laying his hand on Andrew's shoulder, "is Don Ricardo Luiz Ruey, a gentleman, a patriot, and the future president of our unhappy country."

Webster put his hands on the young man's shoulders. "Ricardo, my son," he asked earnestly, "do you think you could give me some little hint of the approximate date on which you will assume office? By the nine gods of war, I never wanted a friend at court so badly as I want one tonight."

Webster sat down and helped himself from a box of cigars he found on Ricardo's bureau. "I feel I am among friends at last," he announced between preliminary puffs "so listen while I spin a strange tale. I've been the picture of bad luck ever since I started for this infernal—this wonderful country of yours. In New Orleans I took a Sunday morning stroll in Jackson square and came across two men trying to knife another. In the interest of common decency I interfered and won a sweeping victory, but to my amazement the prospective corpse took to his heels and advised me to do the same———"

Ricardo Ruey sprang for John Stuart Webster. "By George," he said in English. "I'm going to hug you, too. I really ought to kiss you, because I'm that man you saved from assassination, but—too long in the U. S. A., I suppose; I've lost the customs of my country."

"Get out," yelled Webster, fending him off. "By the way, Ricardo—I'm going to call you Rick for short—do you happen to have any relatives in this country?"

"Yes, a number of second and third cousins."

"Coming down on the steamer, I didn't like to appear curious, but all the time I wanted to ask you one question."

"Ask it now."

"Are you a Sobrantean?"

"I was born in this country and raised here until I was fourteen."

"But you're—why, hang it, You're not a Latin?"

and seven o'clock Sunday evening.

American and British newspaper correspondents will be permitted to accompany the Polish delegates, the Bolshevik authorities having expressed the desire that they be present.

After meeting the Soviet delegates on the road, the Polish commissioners will probably be taken to Minsk where the formal peace conference is expected to take place.

Claim Situation Improved

The two-man mission that went to the front to inform the Bolsheviki that Poland wishes to send peace delegates, returned here today and there is a more confident feeling in the city than has been prevalent during the past fortnight. High officials state they considered the fall of the city now out of the question.

The Polish mark which has been quoted during the last few days at 2.70 for one dollar took a decided turn for the better today, raising to 1.75.

Waitresses from hotels and cafes have taken the place of men in all of Warsaw's commercial houses, the war office, and other branches of the government. More women are at present employed than at any time since the foundation of the Republic.

Airplanes from the Soviet line along the Warsaw front are daily part of the city's defense, aviators flying from the Warsaw airdrome every twenty or thirty minutes for the front.

Simon S. Askecasy, a member of one of the oldest Jewish families in Warsaw, and professor of history in the Lemburg University, left for Paris as the second Polish delegate to the league of nations. A branch of the American legation has been established at the Hotel Monopol in Posen where it will organize to await developments.

J. Campbell White, secretary of the American legation here, will remain in Warsaw as long as possible.

Edward Nobel of Boston, Mass., a lieutenant in the Kosciuszko squad of aviators who was wounded in the Keiv campaign has been promoted to captain and has been awarded the highest Polish military decoration.

Miawa, an important city on the Warsaw-Danzig railroad, about fifty miles northwest of this city has been taken by the Russian-Bolsheviks, according to reports in military circles here tonight.

The Soviet forces are creeping along the Prussian frontier and are gradually working their way toward the Vistula River.

skirts of the Carnival grounds, and upon hearing the call for large families, he rushed his family to the foreground. Ed Lipke, Wisconsin Rapids, contending for the prize with a family of three boys, saw Mr. Anderson approaching with his family in phalanx formation, and immediately faded back into the crowd. The family, consisting of 5 children, Dorothy 10, Semelia 7, Ellen 6, Richard 4, and Theodore Jr. 3, were handed up on to the Judges stand, where they unconcernedly viewed the crowd until the judges awarded the prize. Mr. Anderson stated after the contest that one son, Robert, age 9, was not on the grounds at the time. The prize amounted to $5.00, a dollar for each child.

Hospital Benefit Tonight

Tonight it is expected that the largest crowd so far in attendance at the Carnival, will be on the Carnival grounds. The proceeds of the Carnival tonight will be donated by the Elks' Club to the Riverview Hospital Association, and this fact, together with the fact that weather conditions have improved and that the general enthusiasm and interest in the Carnival has been gradually working up to a climax, will undoubtedly bring out one of the largest crowds ever in attendance at a Wisconsin Rapids Carnival. The contest to be held this evening will be in the nature of a guessing contest, each person on the grounds to be allowed one guess on the number of patients taken care of in the Riverview Hospital July 1, '15 to July 1, '20.

Women's Federation to assist

The Women's Federation of Wisconsin Rapids will assist the Elks tonight at the Carnival grounds, and over 50 women have volunteered their assistance. Two women are to be present in each booth to hand out the ballots for the Queen contest.

The committee on decoration of the Queen's float, are engaged in preparing the float for Saturday night, under the direction of Fred A. Roenius. Flowers are needed to complete the decoration and the committee asked the Tribune to announce that any one willing to contribute any flowers, should notify the committee or deliver the flowers to the A. G. Miller Miller home on Third street south. Yellow flowers are desired, preferably with long stems.

Neenah — Work on the annex building to the Kimberly high school here has been commenced. Increased school attendance made the building necessary.

U. S. RADIO STATION NEAR BORDEAUX IS SOLD FRENCH GOV'T.

RADIO STATION STARTED DURING THE WAR IS TWICE AS POWERFUL AS ANNAPOLIS STATION

Paris, France — The LaFayette wireless station near Bordeaux, designed and erected by American forces during the war has been turned over to the French government. It is the most powerful plant in existance with double the range of the Annapolis installation.

The armistice found the station half completed and so the completion has been slow as the urgent need of it no longer existed. It is to be used as part of the comprehensive system planned by the French service for reaching all French colonial points by wireless.

Eight towers of structural steel, each within a very few feet of the Woolworth building in height are grouped in two rows of four to support antennae that cover an aerial surface about a mile long and a fourth of a mile wide. Each tower weighs 550 tons as compared with a weight of 2,700 tons for the Eiffel tower in Paris which is only a fourth higher than the LaFayette structures.

The range of the station is more than 13,000 miles, halfway around the earth. Previously the largest French station was that at Lyons which works easily with New York, daily.

PLAN TO BEAUTIFY ROMAGNE CEMETERY

FRENCH GOVERNMENT TO PURCHASE ADDITIONAL LAND ADJOINING ARGONNE CEMETERY

Paris.—In order to prevent any commercial encroachment upon Romagne cemetery, where 23,000 American soldiers are buired, the French government has been asked by the American Army Graves Registration Service authorities to purchase the gentle slope facing the front of the cemetery, and the entire crest of the hill occupied in part by the cemetery, as well as plots at both sides.

The Romagne, Suresnes, and Belleau Woods cemeteries have been approved by the Secretary of War as the permanent resting places of more than 30,000 soldiers dead who will continue to sleep in French soil. Suresnes, which is on the slope of Mont Valerien, one of the forts built to defend Paris, is already protected against encroachment of any sort, and the same is nearly true of Belleau Woods.

The extra ground to be purchased at Romagne will not only safeguard the cemetery against any encroachment but will provide areas which will be used by American horticultural experts to surround the hallowed spot with trees and shrubbery. At the present time the cemetery is surrounded only with a long wall, and there is no available space for planting.

The beautification of the cemetery will not begin for some months as most of the bodies in the cemetery are to be removed to America, and this work will not start until mid-September and cannot be finished until next year. After this work is finished bodies from other cemeteries will be moved in.

Marinette—Marinette County has a greater number of industrial fields of cold resistant corn than any other county in the state, according to H. W. Albertz, assistant secretary of the state experiment association, who has been inspecting Marinette county fields. He finds grain conditions in the county generally favorable.

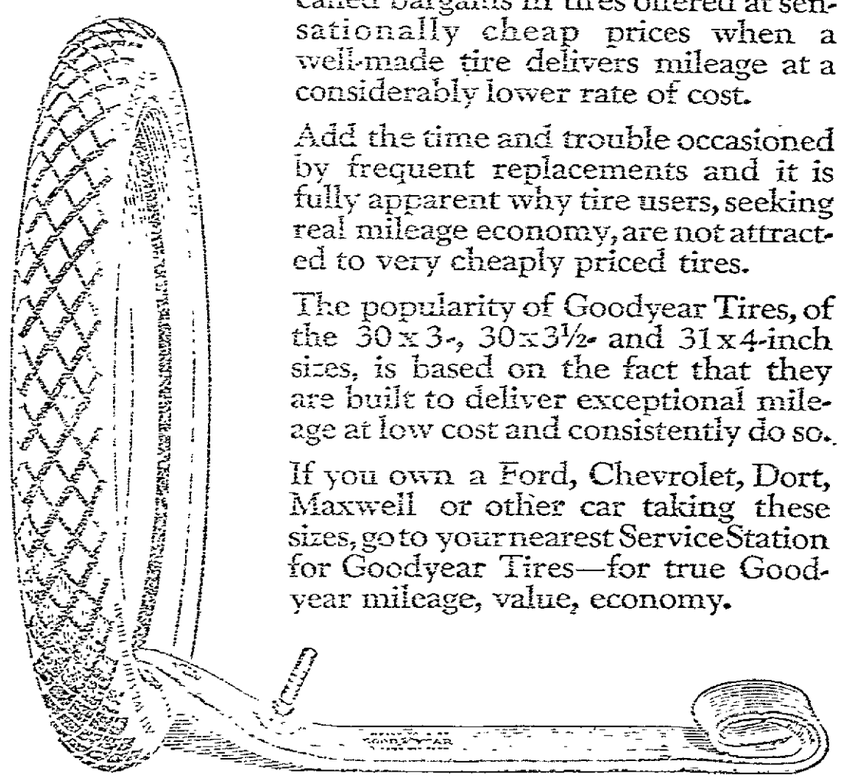
Low-Cost Mileage—Get It in Goodyear Small Car Tires



There is no economy in buying so-called bargains in tires offered at sensationally cheap prices when a well-made tire delivers mileage at a considerably lower rate of cost.

Add the time and trouble occasioned by frequent replacements and it is fully apparent why tire users, seeking real mileage economy, are not attracted to very cheaply priced tires.

The popularity of Goodyear Tires, of the 30x3-, 30x3½- and 31x4-inch sizes, is based on the fact that they are built to deliver exceptional mileage at low cost and consistently do so.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires—for true Goodyear mileage, value, economy.

30 x 3½ Goodyear Double-Cure Fabric, All-Weather Tread $23.50

30 x 3½ Goodyear Single-Cure Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread $21.50

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost no more than the price you are asked to pay for tubes of less merit—why risk costly casings when such sure protection is available? 30 x 3½ size in waterproof bag $4.50
